

Inclusive practice using examples from four 'games families'

This session will look at formal 'games families' included in physical education programmes around the world.

Ken Black will share examples of inclusive practice, with practical strategies and ideas, in the following games areas:

- target
- net/wall
- batting and fielding
- invasion.

Teaching these games areas inclusively has implications for physical education practitioners and this session will offer clear practical options that can be easily integrated into programmes of study.
